5 FACTORS TO CONSIDER WHEN BOOKING YOUR WEDDING PHOTOGRAPHER

1. STYLE

Narrow down your search by knowing what style of photography you are most attracted to. Romantic, film, colorful, moody, natural, classic, sharp... just to name a few. Knowing what style you want to see in your photos 20+ years from now is one of the most important things to consider prior to booking your photographer.

2. IT'S A VIBE

Personality is a big one (say it louder for the people in the back!) You will spend your entire wedding day with your photographer by your side – choose one that you know is professional, joyful, hardworking and brings the right presence to your wedding day.

3. EXPERIENCE

Let's just say, you definitely don't want this to be your photographer's first rodeo. Experience is a must. Weddings are a one-time event, moments cannot be recreated and ultimately, you want to be confident that your photographer is capturing all of the most important moments of your day in a beautiful way.

4. QUALITY

The quality of your photographer's work should be visible at first glance and should go beyond just a pretty photo. The overall client experience should leave you feeling well taken care of throughout your engagement and wedding planning process. If photos mean a lot to you, chances are you're investing in your photographer, the quality should reflect that.

5. CONSISTENCY

Don't hesitate to request to see a full gallery. These days, it's fairly easy for anyone to have a perfectly curated Instagram feed, so you'll want to make sure that your photographer's work is consistent from start to finish on a wedding day.
